

Ever wonder why these elites like these spiders? Well I think I have gotten it figured out. No, it has nothing to do with any sort of magical esoteric stuff. It has to do with how many of their control structures work. But first let me explain the basics of spider mechanics. A spider has many legs (eight) that are controlled by the head. The legs and head of the spider are provided energy by the abdomen. Simple enough a spider is divided into three parts the head, legs, and abdomen. Now into what these three things could symbolise.

Die Wilson-Affaire.

(Ein Bild ohne Worte.)

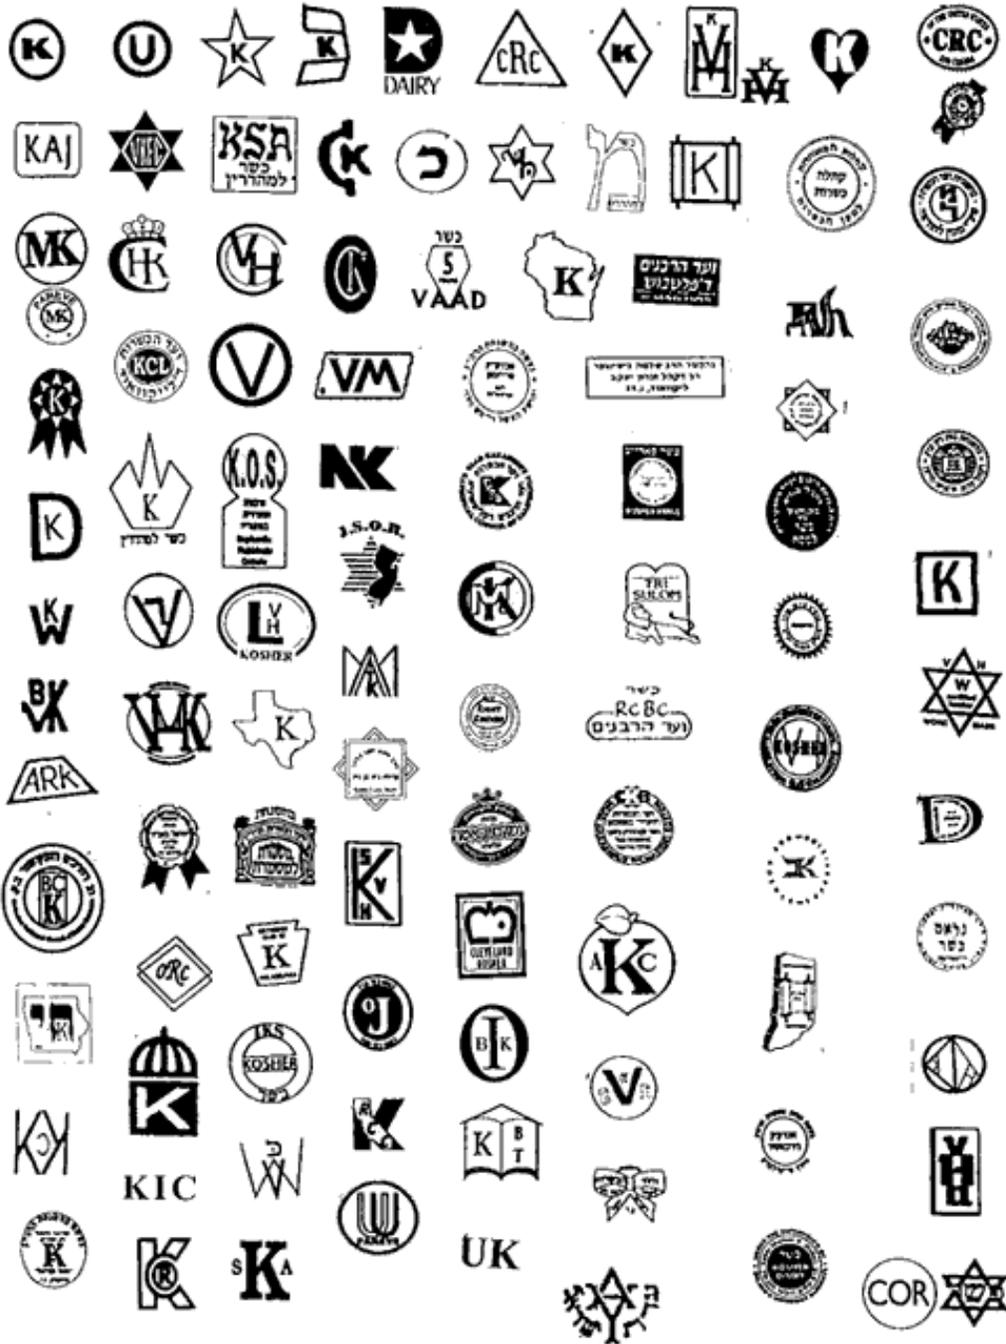

First we shall start with the abdomen as a provider of energy and nourishment. This can easily be seen as the various financial institutions and corporations, but nourishment could also be considered emotions (white guilt) or a simple cup of goyim blood. Without the abdomen the spider would die from lack of nourishment just as the elites would.

The legs are basically the various institutions that are controlled by the "head". Without instructions from the head the legs will not move. If they were to move though it would not be in any coordinated fashion. In the realm of social control these legs would be things such as religions (particularly monotheism), the judicial system and so on. In the realm of political correctness these things would be feminists (fatties), angry brown people, butt bandits, and all the other joys of democracy. Now is the picture coming together?

And, finally the head. The part of the spider that controls and coordinates the rest of the body. This shouldn't be too difficult to figure out. These are the various think tanks, Bilderberg meetings and G8 meetings that are held every few years. Also when it comes to religions/ideologies it isn't really the people running them that would be considered the head. The head in their part would be the binding glue that holds it all together.

The most effective way of killing a spider is to attack the head. To attack the head of the elites you would go after the overall legitimacy of their system. To go after something.(continue)

About two-thirds of all canned, bottled and packaged foods, as well as various other kitchen products, have a small discreet symbol on them-usually a K or U. each time a kosher Seal of approval is applied to a product, consumers are unsuspecting paying a special fee to a Jewish religious organization. This added fee is often referred to as the kosher tax. It is an extortion scam that is very easy to expose and just as easy to explain why you have not heard about it.

Kosher, from the Hebrew, "Fit" or "proper", is usually used to describe foods that are prepared according to Jewish dietary laws. This is according to the Orthodox Union, the largest Jewish kosher supervisory agency in the world, which claims to be "a no for profit, education, outreach and organization of social services", acting as the "national spokesperson" for 1,000 synagogues serving the growing American Jewish community. "

If a product is prepared according to these special Jewish diet laws, the manufacturer can obtain the blessing of a rabbi as well as the required kosher certification-subject to annual renewal fees. Following the procedure will allow the manufacturer to flaunt the coveted kosher symbol on its products. Of course, the special preparation procedure-as well as the seal-does not come cheap. As a result, all consumers pay higher prices for products that carry the kosher Seal of approval. There are an increasing number of food processing and production plants that apply this hidden tax to recoup the additional costs associated with meeting kosher requirements.

Look in your kitchen or on the shelves of your local grocery store for all the proof you need. By looking at these-often obscure-symbols, you can quickly recognize the products that fall in line with this scam. Thousands of manufacturers are forced to pay additional fees, which pass on to consumers, to put these Jewish symbols on their products. This racket is nothing new or unusual. On April 23, 1969, The Wall Street Journal revealed that companies were paying millions of dollars for these symbols. On June 1, 1959, the Jewish bulletin warned Jews that the kosher labeling business was a racket that would eventually be exposed. People are unknowingly paying more for these household products, so that less than 2% of this nation that is Jewish can fund Israel. Why should more than 98% of the country pay for the personal choices of Jews?

There are a number of reasons for rising food prices, and each economist has his own PET explanation and cure. Interestingly, there is one factor that is never mentioned for a reason: it has to do with a secret, Jewish tax put on grocery items.

Although you may find this statement incredible, it is nevertheless true, and you can prove yourself with a simple experience. Let the skeptic go to your kitchen and get out of any dozen cans of food products and a few cans of cleaning powder, soap, etc. Examine the labels of these cans carefully for a little "U" in a circle, or a "K". The U stands for the Union of Orthodox Jews, the K for kosher. Don't confuse this with an R, which means a trademark, or a copyright C. You will find most of these Jewish symbols, or hecshers, in most food products. They mean that the company pays to have a rabbi bless this food for Jewish consumption. In many cases, it is not even a food item, with steel wool and antifreeze also getting "blessed".

Now, some people may defend these "blessings," but they really come down to nothing more than extortion. Ask yourself: if this was nothing more than a bizarre religious ceremony, giving rabbinic approval for a food and food products prepared in a specific way to meet a religious kooky diet, then why are they "blessing" steel wool and antifreeze? These Jews must have a strange diet indeed! Moreover, if these "blessings" are so important to Jews, then why do they charge for them? You would think that they would be willing to do them as a service for their own. Finally, why should this secret tax such as the cult of PC you would go at the thing that binds it all together, its genocidal anti-white hatred. I'm not going to go into great detail on all the different blows to the spiders head that can be delivered as that will be covered in other places on this site.

Remember that when you go spider slaying to always aim for their heads. You could easily exhaust all your energy paring the legs of the beast and cause nothing but a few sore toes. Even if you managed to cut off a leg or two, the beast can still pin you down with the other legs and then inject its poison. Once you find a way to get in a good strike to the spiders head keep repeating the blow until the beast is dead.

MONKEYS

Or, How Lodge Policy Begins

Start with a cage containing five monkeys. Inside the cage, hang a banana on a string and place a set of stairs under it. Before long, one of the monkeys will go to the stairs and start to climb towards the banana. As soon as he touches the stairs, all of the monkeys are sprayed with cold water.

After a while, another monkey makes an attempt with the same result, that all the monkeys are sprayed with cold water. Pretty soon, none of the monkeys will try to climb the stairs. Now, put away the cold water. Remove one monkey from the cage and replace it with a new one. The new monkey sees the banana and wants to climb the stairs. To his surprise and horror, all of the other monkeys attack him. After another attempt and attack, he knows that if he tries to climb the stairs, he will be assaulted.

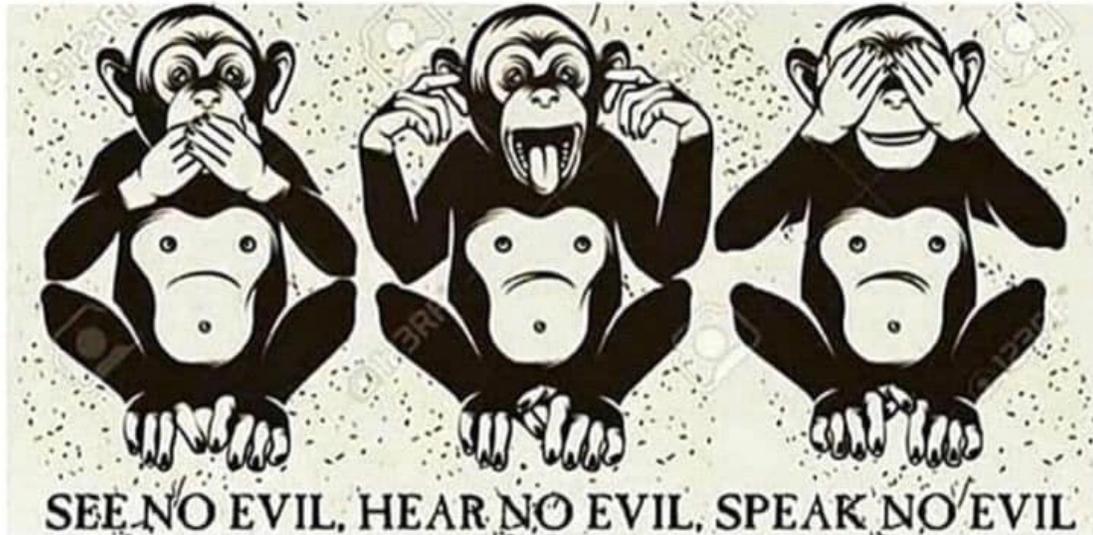

Next, remove another of the original five monkeys and replace it with a new one. The newcomer goes to the stairs and is attacked. The previous newcomer takes part in the punishment with enthusiasm! Likewise, replace a third original monkey with a new one, then a fourth, and then the fifth. Every time the newest monkey takes to the stairs, he is attacked. Most of the monkeys that are beating him have no idea why they were not permitted to climb the stairs or why they are participating in the beating of the newest monkey.

After replacing all the original monkeys, none of the remaining monkeys have ever been sprayed with cold water. Nevertheless, no monkey ever again approaches the stairs to try for the banana. Why not?

BECAUSE AS FAR AS THEY KNOW, THAT'S THE WAY IT'S ALWAYS BEEN DONE AROUND HERE!!!

IT'S ALL A LIE

AND THE JOKE IS ON YOU

Terminology is more than just a label that is put onto something. When you invoke a term you invoke the associations, emotions, and memories that are connected to it. Certain control terms such as racist, anti-semitic, un-American, and so forth in the US of Jew invoke a Pavlovian response in those who hear it. When people hear a term such as racist, connections are made to KKK people keepin' down da nigras, NazisWhoWantToKillSixQuadrillionJews (that's a shit-load of kikes!), and all the negative emotions and memories that are associated with such things.

The reaction is one of pure emotionalism. Emotion has a tendency to override the reasoning skills of even the more intelligent of people. People by nature are not rational and are ruled more by emotion than anything else. This means that their emotional response will override all concepts of logic and reasoning as soon as the term is invoked in any way. If a term is invoked by the enemy against you than it must either be dismissed in a non-provoking and convincing manner or nullified. Prefely it should be

| dismissed and nullified at the same time. | |

Why people respond in such a way is that they are preconditioned to behave and respond in a certain manner when exposed to certain terminology. By continued exposure to propaganda based around a term, people will no longer be able to see anything in relation to the term other than what they have already been exposed to. Even if you are to explain to them what you believe and that you are nothing like what has been propagated to them, they will still see you through the picture that's been painted in their heads. Even if you were to get that picture down to one percent opacity the outline of it would still be there ready to be coloured in again. This is why you never use the enemies terminology to describe yourself.

Of course, your enemies have also terms in place that are used to describe themselves. Terms such as anti-racist (anti-white), humanitarian, and democratic. These are positive terms that are used in a way that puts them at a morale high-ground, basically a superior strategic position. These terms are very similar to the smear terms as they are both created into what they are by heavy propagandising and conditioning. This is to ensure that only good associations, emotions, and memories are triggered by their support terms. For the same reasons you never use the enemies terminology to describe yourself, you never describe the enemy using their terminology.

Because of the conditions that I have mentioned above it is obvious that in order to operate effectively as a movement of any sort you must have your own terminology. Remember that in order to implement ideology, you must first implement terminology. There has never been a political, cultural, or religious movement that did not have terminology. Without terminology there can be no foundation for a movement. If there are no terms that invoke a concept or belief then a movement can never get anywhere. Could you imagine explaining or describing a concept such as Dostoevsky's self-will every time that it must be pointed out, instead of having the option to just say "self-will"?

Now, onto the creation of terminology. I will not be able to go over every topic or subject as that would be near impossible, but I will put down the guide lines so that one with an above average IQ and creativity will be able to make use of it.

Terminology must be simple, new, original, common, familiar, compact, and easy to insert. Simple enough for a child to understand and use. New, so that connections to older less youthful words and terms are not formed in ones mind diluting the term in use. Original, so that one does not seem to be a reactionary that copies from others. Common, as in constructed from common words or phrases that can be seen or heard on a daily basis. Familiar, as in no foreign or archaic words or phrases that people are not able to feel very close to. Compact, so that it can be remembered and transmitted more efficiently to more people in the least amount of space possible. (mental and physical space) Easy to insert into conversation, into written works, into music, into all forms of human communication. It also helps when a term is obvious. So obvious that no one

| notices it unless it is pointed out to them. | |
|--|--|

I will use as an example terms anti-white and pro-white. These are relatively new terms even amongst us pro-whites. These were of course what we always were about, but we were encumbered by terms and memes such as "white nationalist" and "damn Jews want us dead". Both of those two were thoroughly hijacked and twisted by our enemies into what they wanted them to be. Terms such as white nationalist leave much room for discussion and argument, and damn Jews want us dead switched the topic away from our races ongoing genocide to damn Jews. Even if we were to win the arguments, and often we did. Still the enemy would win in the long-term by staying on a consistent

message and implementing the terminology that went with it.

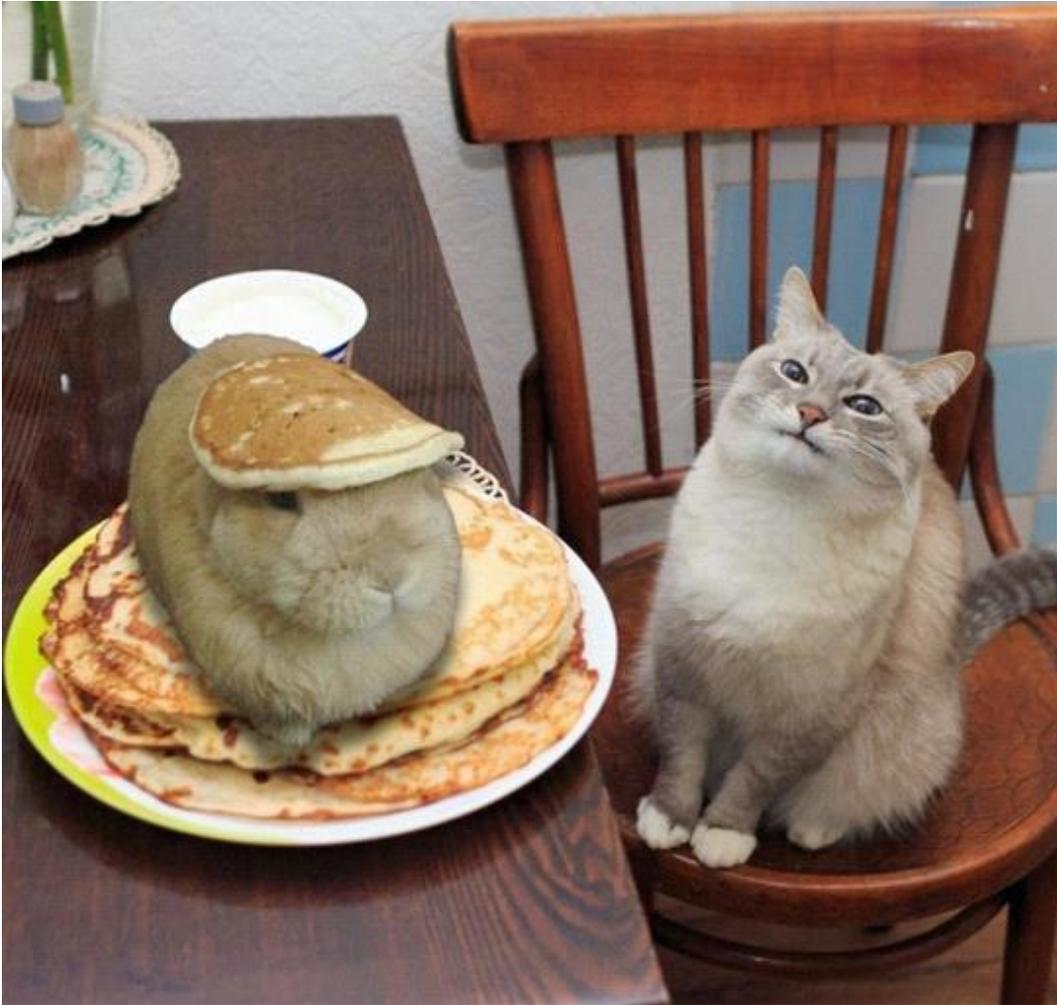

Anti-white and pro-white unlike our past terminologies do not allow for extensive argumentation and debates in which the original point and subject are lost and forgotten to the average spectator. These new terms leave very little wiggle room for a defender. Those on the offensive using them put those on the defensive into a position that is either black or white. There is no shades of grey in between for the defender to elaborate upon. Anti/Pro white are not highly emotionally charged terms since they are essentially a yes or a no. Being more or less new to people connections are not yet formed linking them to any unpleasantness. So, far the enemy has failed to redefine our new terms as we have a good amount of control over their implementation and

| interpretation. | |
|-----------------|--|

In order for terminology to be truly effective the target audience of the terminology must be given considerate thought. The psychology of the target audience is probably the most important thing that must be considered. If you do not know the mind of the audience, how are you to know the reaction that will come from them? All factors must be considered. Their daily lives, political situation, environment, temperament, intelligence, and economic situation. What are their want, needs, beliefs, superstitions, fears, and envies? These are few of many factors that must be considered.
